

Garden Highlights, June 2021

Coastal Tea Tree Leptospermum laevigatum grows along the coast in South East Australia. Plants in this group are known as 'tea trees' from early European settlers using the leaves of some species as a tea substitute. Coastal Tea Tree copes well with salty air, sandy soil, strong winds, drought and limey soils. While large trees often lean or lie down in contorted shapes, there are small forms of this plant that are ideal for creating a hedge. These small forms retain the ability to cope with demanding environments and display profuse white flowers in spring.

What's On: The Tea House is open every day (Bookings for groups, etc. phone 0413 706 535).
